These are some of the observations made by Samuel Gompers president of the American Federation of Labor on his way to Europe, aboard one of the large first class liners bound for Liverpool. As he took the trip for the purpose of studying labor conditions Mr. Gompers thought it would be a Mr. Gompers thought it would be a good idea to begin on the voyage over. So he wrote the captain a note, stating his desire to inspect the ship and telling him frankly his purpose. In the August number of the Federationist, the official organ of the Federation of Labor, Gompers tells how the captain readily agreed to place a guide at his disposal, but how the guide in question hustled him past the plague spots so fast that he was able to see practically nothing of the real conditions among the working sallors. By reason of a little detective work, later, however, Gompers was able to obtain a very fair description of the conditions. The abuse of the tipping system was to Gompers one of the worst tions. The abuse of the tipping system was to Gompers one of the worst evils on board the ship. The stewards, he writes, are paid only $100 a year as wages. The passengers are obliged to make up the rest "Little wonder," he says, "that the stewards 'fully work' their charges in tips." Tip takers rarely, if ever, strike. Gompers suggests that if the steamship stewards would organize a union they would force the steamship companies to pay them decent wages and the long suffering passengers would be relieved of the burden they are now carrying. According to his computabe relieved of the burden they are now carrying. According to his computation Gompers says that $6,000 in tips is given up by the passengers every trip across. He said that the working sailors get from $20 to $30 a month; sleep in miserable quarters; and are supplied with the worst sor of food.

In coming up Ryan's Hill from Pleasant Valley on Tuesday Highway Commissioner Macdonald had a mishap which just missed being a serious accident. At the bend in the hill the clutch of his auto slipped and the machine rolled backward down the steep incline until it crashed against the abutment of a stone culvert. Only this saved it from rolling off a high bank and had not the under side of the machine been stoutly braced with steel rods, recently put in, its collision must have caused a wreck. W. C. Sanford came to the rescue with a team and hauled out the auto which was not disabled.
